The aim and scope:
The main purpose of this session is to exchange views on researches of Asian economic development in relation to the experience of Japan. The recent development of Vietnam is investigated in connection with the export-oriented policy and the Japanese direct investment to Vietnam. Concerning Japanese economic growth, we point out that one of the serious obstacles against the economic growth is the rapid advance of its aging society. In India having enormous population faces also serious environmental problems accompanying its rapid economic growth. We discuss these problems in this session. In addition, by focusing the theoretical aspect of international trade with public infrastructure, we consider the role of public infrastructure in the international trade aspect, in particular the trade with advances countries like Japan.
