Special Session (SS27) on:

Discontent, Hate & Intolerant Attitudes

Organizers:

Alessandra Michelangeli - Department of Economics, Management, and Statistics, University of Milan-Bicocca, Italy. E-mail: alessandra.michelangeli@unimib.it

Alessandra Faggian - Director of Social Sciences Gran Sasso Science Institute, Italy.

Daria Denti - Department of Social Science Gran Sasso Science Institute, Italy.

The aim and scope:

Different kinds of discontent undermine cohesion in society and put a strain on the stability of the economic and political systems. Exploring the mechanisms underlying these processes allows to gain a detailed understanding of such interconnected phenomena.

The aim of this special session is to offer a platform for presenting papers on any kind of discontent by placing emphasis on its relationship with socio-economic and political issues. The special session also aims to provide the opportunity to discuss the policy actions able to mitigate discontent.

The potential contributions to this session include:

- Mapping the geography of discontent
- Identifying and measuring different forms of discontent
- Identifying patterns and determinants of discontent across space
- Identifying the relationship between discontent and socio-economic variables
- The rural/urban divide and resentful behaviours
- Real world socio-economic geographies and online discontent
